Bill Scott receives a congratulatory kiss from his daughter, Laurie, while son Guy and wife Betty look on. Scott held a wide margin throughout election night over his closest opponent, David Logan. The victory was Scott's fifth consecutive election win.

Scott wins by a wide margin as PC's are swept into power Conservative incumbent Bill Scott was elected for a fifth term in the riding of Victoria-Haliburton Tuesday, winning by a wide margin over his closest opponent, Liberal candidate David Logan.

Scott's victory was one link in a chain of wins that saw a number of Liberal cabinet ministers defeated and the Conservatives gain power in a minority government.

The local Conservative candidate jumped into a commanding lead as the first polls reported, and his position was never really threatened as results continued to pour in.

With just 120 of 266 polls reporting, Logan conceded victory, and NDP candidate Patrick Daniel followed suit soon after.

From his campaign headquarters in Lindsay Scott said the national Conservative victory was indicative of "an anti feeling toward the government," (of former Prime Minister Trudeau), and of discontent with the way in which many government programs were administered. He expressed confidence that a seat on the government side of the House meant there was "a greater chance" the riding would reap the benefits of government programs, notably DREE.

Scott said he "ran a clean campaign" but added there were "many things about the campaign I'm not pleased about." He did not elaborate on the statement, although it appeared to contradict his praise for the campaigns of the defeated candidates when they conceded at his headquarters earlier in the evening.

On the prospects for an early defeat of the Conservative minority, Scott said only that he hoped there wouldn't be another election within a year or so, "but I guess there well could be."

For Liberal hopeful David Logan, the defeat marked his third unsuccessful attempt to gain a seat in the traditionally Conservative riding.

Logan was clearly disappointed with his weak showing in the voting, and attributed his inability to make gains over his 1965 and 1968 showings to what he termed, "the road block of the national campaign."

"We had all the votes that our tallies showed that we would get, but we could never tell, right from the beginning of the campaign, what effect the national campaign was having on us."

"Obviously, the national campaign had a very disastrous effect on our chances locally," the Liberal hopeful said.

Logan said "the winds of change seemed to be in the air right from the beginning" and that he could not combat the anti-Trudeau feeling that was pervasive throughout the campaign at the national, as well as at the local level.

Despite the defeat, Logan said he was sticking by the statement he had made throughout the campaign that there was to be what he termed "greater input into Victoria-Haliburton in terms of direct policies."

"I'll be watching very closely, in the months to come, to see whether there is a more direct involvement in the lifting of the per capita income of the average person."

Logan said that in past years, "the comments have been that locally, things couldn't be done because the local member was in opposition, but now, possibly something will be done. We'll just have to wait and see."

NDP candidate Patrick Daniel, who was making his first try for election in the riding, said the results were indicative of the "strong anti Trudeau and anti Liberal feeling that seems to have manifested itself both locally and in various other parts of Ontario anyway, as a vote for the Conservatives."

Daniel declined to speculate on the role of the NDP in the minority government, and on how long the government might last. He did say, however, that he felt the NDP might press for the implementation of certain policies "as a condition of support" for the government, "as they did in the Liberal minority governments of 1972 and 1974."

Daniel said he was pleased with the support that was shown for the NDP in the riding, and that he felt winning greater support was "a long term process."

If another election is called in the near future, he "would be prepared to run again" on the NDP slate, Daniel said.

Final and complete results of the voting on the riding were not available by press time late Tuesday night.

Careful use of forests vital Ministry official tells county

Improving the quality rather than the quantity of forest cover in Haliburton County is the major goal of local forest management programs, according to a Ministry of Natural Resources spokesman.

Brian Cross told Haliburton County Council last week that regeneration of hardwood forests in the Great Lakes, St. Lawrence Forest Region, which includes Haliburton County, "is not a problem of great proportions."

"In recent years," Cross said, "there had been increasing concern and related attention focussed on the matter of the widening gap in the province between area cut over and area regenerated."

"On a provincial scale," he said, "there is little doubt that the situation, as represented, is accurate." He stressed however, that the problems of the province in general should not be confused with those facing forest management programs in Haliburton County.

While softwood forests in northern Ontario can only be regenerated through replanting and reseeded, hardwood forests of Haliburton County and other areas of the province can be regenerated through proper cutting and tree selection, Cross said.

And ignoring what he termed "the silvicultural facts of life" in the interests of immediate economic gain "would lead to economic suicide for local wood using industries."

Historically, Cross said, forests in many areas have been downgraded in quality "as a result of such factors as market demand for trees of certain species, quality class, or size class, or combinations of these."

Cross said the fault for this downgrading does not necessarily lie with the logger.

"He is simply attempting to make a living by supplying...the specific requirements of markets."

Market demands, however, "are not always compatible with the silvicultural laws of nature."

"In other words," Cross said, "If the market's demands must take precedence over silvicultural (forest management) considerations,"

Lutterworths' appeal rejected by clerks

Lutterworth township's appeal of its 1979 school board levy was overturned last Thursday at a meeting of municipal clerk treasurers.

Council voted to appeal the levy when it learned that the township had the highest percentage levy increase of any municipality in the county.

Lutterworth's share of the total $4.8 million Haliburton County Board of Education levy was set at $203,066, up more than $21,000 over the township's 1978 education levy of $181,879.

The increase totalled 11.7 percent, highest of any municipality in the county. Levy increases averaged 9.2 percent across the county this year. Lutterworth's assessment, however, increased 3.41 percent in 1978, compared with an overall 1.8 percent assessment rise across the county.

Pilot, passenger 'want to keep it quiet'

Airplane crashes, cause not revealed

An airplane crash in which four people escaped serious injury Saturday afternoon is producing a number of unanswered questions. And the answers may never be released to anyone but the Ministry of Transport and Communications.

Details of the crash, which occurred at the Sir Sam's Inn private airstrip at 2:40 p.m., are being withheld by the aircraft's pilot, William Harding of Thornhill. He said "everyone seems to have it (the crash) all screwed up, and I don't want it worse."

The 1978 Cessna had been coming in for a landing at the strip when there was a sudden loss of altitude. The aircraft crashed onto the runway about eight feet from the water's edge, a police report said. Harding and a passenger on the plane, Grant Rae of Haliburton, received minor lacerations. Two other passengers on the plane were uninjured.

"There seemed to be a drop," said Rae, who thought the wind across the field may have affected the plane's flight. He refused to comment further on the accident. "We're trying to keep it quiet," said Rae, adding that "it's his (Harding's) ballgame. I went along with him on the ride and I'll go along with him on this."

When police arrived at the scene of the accident, Harding and others involved in the crash disallowed an investigation by the OPP. Harding said he was not pleased with police action at the scene, and said some details given out by them to the media and the public were not accurate. The damage estimate a pilot gave to the police was $45,000. Harding said the estimate was "ridiculous", but would not give an accurate figure.

The Ministry of Transport and Communications have sent Harding a "do-it-yourself" crash report kit, which he said he will complete and return.

Singers, comedians, gymnasts featured

Festival of Fun draws large crowd to HHSS

The auditorium at Haliburton Highlands Secondary School was filled to capacity last Thursday night for the annual Haliburton Boy Scouts Festival of Fun. And those who turned up for what has become one of the community's major events were not disappointed.

This year's version of the festival featured some tried and true acts, as well as some innovative new ones, all for the benefit of the Haliburton County Chapter of the Association for Children with Learning Disabilities.

Opening the evening were the Beavers, youngest members of the Scouting movement in the county.

About a dozen other acts followed, and kept the audience entertained for close to three hours.

Among those taking part were the Guild Choir under the direction of Marilyn Stouffer, Bill Gliddon, who performed a movement of a work he has composed for solo piano, the choir of St. George's Church, which premiered a humorous vocal work by Bill Gliddon, the comedy skits of Graham Neville and Steve Bugden, singer Lisa Teatro, the Barnhart sisters, Bill O'Reilly on trumpet accompanied by Melissa Stephens, the Haliburton County Gymnastics Club under coach Laura Aymong, and several other acts, including Shirley Rydman and her group, who acted out a zany version of Cinderella.

If there was one flaw in the evening, it was that the pacing was sometimes slow, with waits of several minutes between acts.

It was a minor flaw, however, in an otherwise entertaining evening that capped weeks of work by local Boy Scouts and their leaders.

Wilberforce: a growing concern

Business climate looks very bright

by Joe Banks

There was a time when Wilberforce had so few businesses that if you wanted to buy anything more elaborate than a pair of work pants or a woollen mackinaw, you'd be off to Haliburton, Minden or Lindsay to find it.

But those days will very soon be over. The small village in Monmouth township has been expanding its services at a considerable rate, and has become the county's miniature boomtown. Two new businesses were opened this past month, a new liquor store is being built, and the village's only grocery store is rebuilding this summer. Wilberforce Veneer and Martin Lumber are undergoing major expansions.

What has brought this sudden surge of business into the community? Why are people finding the village attractive for opening business ventures? What will the expansion mean for the people of Wilberforce, or the people of the county?

"Sooner or later, we had to get some type of store in here," says Keith Tallman, reeve of Monmouth township. He's an electrician by trade, and has done much of the work for the new businesses himself.

Wilberforce has earned itself a reputation for being a progressive and friendly village, and its people have an impressive ability to cooperate with one another. No one has found that out more than the Storey's and the Water-ton's. The two families have recently opened brand-new businesses in Wilberforce. Both came into the community as relative strangers, and both say they've liked what they've seen so far.

Glen Storey officially opened his convenience store beside the library in the village last week. He came from Burlington in January, where he ran a hardware store for a number of years. Visiting his grandfather in Bancroft, he "fell in love with the north," and began looking for business possibilities in the area.

He talked to people in the area, specifically in Wilberforce, and found out what they wanted as another business in the village. The answer was a convenience store, and Storey took their advice. Today, he's operating Glen's 10 to 10, a business he hopes will provide he and his family with an adequate living.

Storey says he was impressed with facilities in the community.

"I noticed the curling rink, the centre, the arena; a sort of semi urban environment where my kids would have the amenities of recreation." Yet, says Storey, he still loves the peaceful, friendly atmosphere of the village, and as "the outsider looking in", feels that anyone else coming from a city would be impressed with what Wilberforce has to offer. And Storey feels there is ample opportunity for others.

"I think there's still a need for other types of businesses here. People don't have to drive 25 or 30 miles to get something."

Storey is confident that local people will support local businesses and says he's gearing his business toward the local market. "If they had the shopping here, they'd shop here," he says. Expansion will put Wilberforce "on

Bill O'Reilly was one of a large number of performers who took part in the annual Boy Scouts' Festival of Fun at Haliburton Highlands Secondary School last Thursday night. The Festival raised funds for the newly formed Haliburton County chapter of the Association for Children with Learning Disabilities.

It was moving day in Haliburton Village last Wednesday when the old Haliburton Pioneer Museum was moved to its new site. Hydro and telephone lines had to be disconnected, traffic was stopped and limbs were cut off trees to make way for the antique load.

Damage extensive in vehicle crashes

A Minden youth escaped injuries when the vehicle he was driving rolled over in a ditch near Bush Road last Thursday morning.

Brian Bacon, 17, was southbound on a private road when the mishap occurred. Damage to the vehicle is estimated at $1,000.

An Alberta man was charged with impaired driving after the motorcycle he was driving collided with a car at the intersection of Maple Avenue and Mountain Street in Haliburton.

Charged was David Fick of Wetaskiwin who was westbound on Mountain Street when his car collided with another driven by Glenda Mumford, 23, of Willowdale. She was negotiating a turn from Maple onto Mountain Street when the mishap occurred. Fick received minor injuries in the accident.

Damage to Fick's motorcycle is estimated at $70, while Mumford's car received $100 worth of damage.

A 20-year old Don Mills man escaped injury when the car he was driving plunged into Hall's Lake Sunday morning.

Lawrence Chase was southbound on highway #35 north of Carnarvon when he went onto an east shoulder and entered the lake.

Chase's car sustained $600 in damage.

Fire crews from the Minden and Bracebridge districts of the Ministry of Natural Resources gathered in a farm field at Minden last Wednesday to practise helicopter ground loading and unloading techniques. The men worked in pairs, one man signalling the pilot and the other hooking up the load or assisting the signaller. The exercise is carried out annually by the MNR. Approximately 30 men took part in the practice.

tions, we must be prepared to accept a continuing decline in productivity and quality of our forest resources, and to all intents and purposes, the virtual liquidation of these forests."

In the past, Cross said, it was not uncommon for a logger to use only the bottom nine feet of a large tree, and to leave the rest of it on the forest floor, unused, because the market demanded only the best quality wood.

Cross said, however, that "the situation has changed dramatically in the last few years."

"Markets for pulp quality wood and an ever increasing variety of species, as well as rapidly growing demands for low quality material such as fuelwood, have greatly improved the prospects and opportunities of removing the 'weeds and junk' trees in addition to those of preferred quality."

Cross said the trend toward this use of low quality trees, "presents one of the brightest prospects for the future economic development of Haliburton County."

His speech was the second in a series he will make to Haliburton County council.

Next month Cross is expected to discuss the effects of acid rain on the forest cover of the county.

Snowdon council opens gravel tenders

At a regular meeting of Snowdon Township council May 9, the following matters were considered.

Guides plan bottle drive

Haliburton Girl Guides and Brownies will take to the streets next Saturday to collect bottles from area residents.

The bottle drive is part of a fund raising effort that will eventually see the construction of the new chalet sleeping quarters at Camp Adelaide near Haliburton Village.

Local Guides and Brownies say they have outgrown their present lodge at the camp and need a new building to house 72 girls and leaders.

Plans call for the new chalet to be a two storey, fully winterized structure. The present lodge will be opened up to accommodate 36 girls and leaders.

Only Coke, Pepsi, and Canada Dry bottles will be accepted for the drive with the drop off point to be the Sisson residence on Highland Street in the village. A pickup will be arranged for those who are unable to bring their bottles in.

Persons wishing to donate bottles to the cause, but who would like them collected should call 457-1355 or 457-1966 after 6 p.m. before next Saturday.

Slides tell of Mexican trip

Anyone interested in history and travel will want to make it a point to turn up at Haliburton Highlands Secondary School Friday night, May 25.

A public showing of slides taken by HHSS students during their recent trip to Mexico to visit Mayan ruins is slated to begin at 7:30 p.m.

Frank Wallace, the HHSS history teacher who accompanied the students on their journey over March break, will be on hand to comment on the slides and to answer questions.

Admission to the slide show is free, and everyone interested in learning more about the past is invited to attend.

Lutterworth appeal is denied

County municipalities have appealed the apportionment of school board levies in the past, claiming that the apportionment is based on outdated assessment factors which do not provide a realistic picture of assessments. Such appeals, however, have been unsuccessful, even when they have been heard before the Ontario Municipal Board.

Sharon Hunter, clerk of Monmouth Township and secretary for the arbitration board meeting, said Tuesday that the clerks were unanimous in upholding the levies as presented by the school board.

Lutterworth had requested that the levies be reapportioned, but had provided no proposal on a more equitable formula for doing so, Hunter said.

Appeals for reapportionment based on a form of market value assessment have been heard in other years, Hunter said.

Lutterworth has the right to appeal the arbitration board's decision before the Ontario Municipal Board if council wishes.

Wilberforce: The county's latter-day boom town

Three new businesses are being built, and one other is expanding

Joyce and Ben Waterton inside their new food outlet

the map", he predicts, and he believes continue as other shopping facilities are built.

Ben and Joyce Waterton are a couple who are also going to cater to the full-time resident around Wilberforce. Last Saturday, they opened BJ's Food Take-Out, the first fast food location in the village. A 75-year-old retired building inspector named Keith Cameron finished the take-out with dark woodgrain panelling and old, weathered pieces of wood, giving the room a very "homey" atmosphere.

"We just love it here," says a smiling Joyce Waterton. "We feel a lot of people would come here if the work was here."

Her husband Ben adds "We're not opening the place only for the tourists. We're here for the convenience of the locals, too." The Watertons don't feel they're taking a risk in building the business; they both agree that the "place will go."

Ben Waterton thinks the success of a business in a community such as Wilberforce hinges on the personalities of the owners. If a business person is friendly to others of the community, "you'll get cooperation all the way." The couple owned Elephant Lake Lodge prior to their recent project and have come to learn that fact well. They're originally from England, and have lived in Canada now for 29 years. Joyce Waterton says "this is our home", and the people of Wilberforce, and their clientele at the lodge, have made them feel that way.

As for the recent mini-boom in building and expansion in Wilberforce, Mr. Storey thinks the reason is due mostly to the attitude of the people living here.

"People are making it boom," he says happily. "We can't afford to listen to gloom and doom - 50 people will give you 50 reasons for not opening, but you have to listen to the optimists, and I think there are mostly optimists here."

The citizens of Wilberforce came to appreciate what "tough times were like. They know the benefits of cooperation."

'...we need larger facilities...'

But getting right down to the basic facts, Mrs. Waterton says Wilberforce is just a "real, real friendly town with a friendly atmosphere." The take-out will mean residents will be able to eat roasted chicken, hamburgers, french fries, salads and soon pizza and submarines, without going out of the village. It's something the Watertons have always wanted to do.

"The people here don't ask what they can get out of the community, but what they can put out."

And nobody, as the Watertons and the Storeys agree, has put more into the community in business than Agnew's Red and White grocery and hardware store. It was started in 1921 by their parents, and today, Gary and Wayne Agnew operate the business with the personal touch in mind. And the touch is gaining them a new 10,000 square foot, double level store, which they will build beside the original building this summer. The building will house a grocery section on the bottom level and a hardware department on the top.

"We realized that we need larger facilities," Gary Agnew says, looking around the cramped store. "We want to make it easier for the customer to shop."

The business indeed has grown immensely since 1921. The walls have been expanded several times, and so the Agnews believe the circumstances lend themselves to the construction. They may, after moving the business into the new building, "give the old building a facelift," but no definite plans have been made yet.

result; more persons living in and around the village, and probably an increase in local spending.

Wilberforce Veneer, an established veneer plant within the village, is one of those industries which can create the impetus to spend locally. The company is now in the process of constructing a massive 22,400 square-foot plant. The old mill will continue to operate for some time, and will manufacture furniture frames and lumber dressings for its parent company, Curvey's. The front section of the old mill is expected to be demolished.

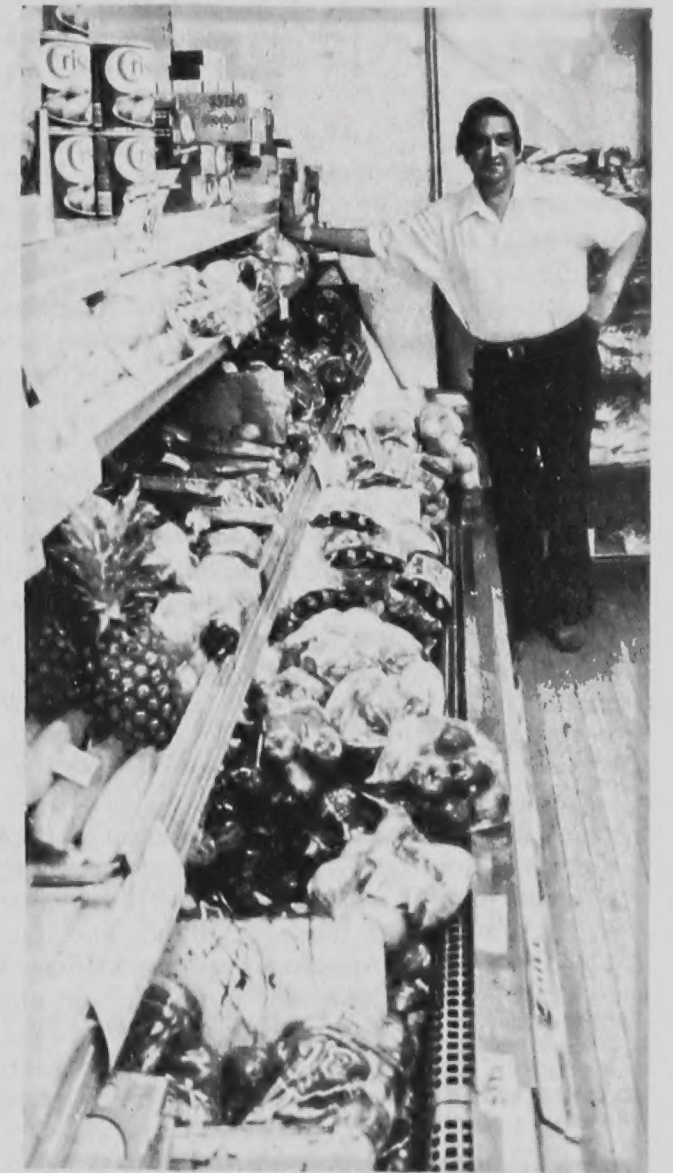

According to Floyd Tighe, General Manager, the operations at the veneer plant will be gradually shifted into the new location, which is just behind the old mill. Tighe says the company hopes to start the moving operation "in a couple of weeks." Steam kilns and a huge boiler tank that will produce some of the plant's electricity have already been installed, and some other pieces of new and used equipment are being shipped in.

The new plant, says Tighe, will create some new jobs, but how many it will employ is not known yet.

Just down the road at Harcourt, at the county's largest employer, Martin Lumber, an expansion is also going on. But a spokesman at the mill preferred not to release details "for reasons that I can't let out at this time."

A new mill has been constructed and is now, for some unknown reason, sitting idle, waiting for some form of funding to finance the operation. The mill, a local villager says, will create some 200 new jobs; that's 200 new persons in the community to utilize businesses in Wilberforce.

Homes will be needed to house these people, and the township is well on its way. Some 20 to 30 new homes are in their second phase of completion in Monmouth's latest subdivision project, and property owned by Wilberforce Veneer has been subdivided into 30 to 40 new cottage lots. Reeve Keith Tallman says the possibility of senior citizens apartments is not far off. "We have a site," he said. "We need an application to survey now."

As the senior citizens move from their homes into the apartments, says Tallman, this will create more room for younger people to move into the community. He feels the Martin Lumber expansion "is going to go", and that there would be no problem filling the housing in the area.

All these factors, projects and ideas are combining to create an excitement in Wilberforce, an excitement that just may see Wilberforce become the county's latter-day boom-town. And if that happened, it really wouldn't be to the village's surprise. It was they who crowned the village "the town of achievement."

Setting an example

Nestled close to the eastern end of Haliburton County is a hamlet that has been looking ahead for as long as anyone can remember. While other county hamlets and villages are content to stay the same, or to complain about what the others do or do not have, the community of Wilberforce has been quietly but steadily growing, not so much in size as in services. The latest round of improvement in the hamlet is nothing short of a boom, and if all goes according to plan, it is a pattern that is destined to continue in coming years.

In the last few months, steps have been taken that are leading to an improved business climate in the Wilberforce area. Most significant is the current expansion at Wilberforce Veneer and Lumber Company. Not only is a new factory being built behind the present plant, but the old building will take on a new life with the expansion of Curve Ply wood products into the facility. It is an expansion that is likely to provide new jobs in the very near future. As well, several changes are taking place in the service sector of the hamlet's economy. Construction is well underway on a new liquor store, a new variety store has just been opened, as has a take-out restaurant, and Agnew's Red & White is expanding its facilities.

All of these ventures involve an element of risk for those who have committed the capital and the energy to see them through from idea to reality. But in each case, the need has been recognized, the market gauged, and the risk accepted.

That willingness to accept a risk and to forge ahead with a new business venture in the light of doom and gloom predictions for the future that can be heard everywhere, is indeed a heartening sign for the residents of Wilberforce and the surrounding area. If that willingness to take a risk were more pervasive in Canada, it is just possible that the country's economy would be tending a good deal more toward boom than it has been in the recent past.

As they have in so many other ways, the business people of Wilberforce and the citizens who support them are demonstrating a willingness to work together that is making the hamlet optimistic about the future. And in no small way, that should make the rest of us sit up and take notice. For any improvement in the economy, no matter how small, makes life a little better for us all.

Self preservation

A glance at the activity report of the Minden OPP this week reveals what many people have long suspected; that some of those who come north each weekend to share the county with the rest of us seem to come here for the express purpose of doing themselves bodily harm. And the disquieting fact is that many of those bound to injure themselves through carelessness, intoxication, immaturity or irresponsibility, injure responsible citizens in the process.

Every weekend throughout the summer the sound of crunching metal and breaking glass will echo along county highways, followed by the hooting of ambulances and the scream of police sirens. And every weekend as well, Haliburton County lakes will be the scene of near misses as speeding boats buzz up and down, threatening the safety and survival of canoeists, sailers and swimmers.

While it can be argued that stupidity and irresponsibility are human characteristics that will never be eradicated, it must also be recognized that there are ways and means of stemming the rising tide of summer accidents.

One answer would be increased police patrol of both highways and lakes. That isn't likely to happen however, because of a lack of funds, and a reluctance on the part of the provincial government to spend more on police protection. For most of the year, the Minden OPP have an adequate staff. But when the summer influx swarms into the Highlands, the police are hard pressed to keep up with the calls. An increase in staff would make the police presence felt to a greater extent. That wouldn't stop all the accidents, of course, but it might help to get a greater number of speeders and drunk drivers off the roads before they have a chance to collide with a rock cut or someone else's car.

And although we can lay much of the blame for accidents on drivers, the fact is that the roads in this area are not entirely without fault. Many of Haliburton County's roads leave much to be desired from the point of view of driver safety. Road surfaces on several of the county's most travelled routes are simply too narrow.

But while road widening and extra police cars on the road would be positive steps, the instinct for self preservation has to play a big factor for all county residents in the summer months. By slowing down a little, anticipating the move of the oncoming driver and picking an escape route, and by watching out for the boater who cares little about his own or anyone else's safety, all of us will improve the odds of surviving the annual spate of summer accidents.

As others see it

Do you know what a township council meeting is all about?

Do you have any idea what the councillors you elected are doing? If the answer to these questions is "no", then it might be worthwhile to attend a council meeting, and find out what politics is all about.

There are many taxpayers throughout the Townships of Georgian Bay, and Muskoka Lakes, who don't have the faintest idea what their councillors are up to, and what is being decided during council meetings.

As taxpayers, you have the right to know, and you are entitled to sit in on council meetings, and form your own opinions. Lately though, some of those opinions might reflect the fact that "the louder you talk, the more voices you drown out."

Council meetings in both townships as of late have become forums for voice battles. Some of the softer spoken councillors listen for an opening to sneak in a few words, but are mowed down by a sudden surge of louder words that carries the discussion.

At this week's council meeting of the Township of Georgian Bay, it was a verbal game of football. A private businessman in the township approached council on a matter of garbage containers, and an agreement where the township would be responsible for the containers and pick-up.

Council indicated that they were not prepared to sign an agreement to provide this businessman with a garbage box. They would provide him with a container, but they didn't want to sign any agreement for pick-up, in case at some future date, the businessman insisted that the township provide six garbage containers instead of one.

Mixed into the discussion was an element of logic. The obvious ingredient was anger, and while the shouting match carried on, the element of logic decreased at a low but steady rate.

Other citizens who had come to approach council on private matters were treated to a verbal display of "the louder the better, and as long as it's loud it doesn't have to make sense."

There were a total of three consecutive shouting matches during the afternoon card. Each presentation gained in intensity from the previous, almost attempting to do one better. The final statement uttered by an unhappy businessman was "you can all go to hell."

No doubt there is a place for anger, yelling and cursing. Maybe out in a field somewhere, where only the cows can hear the vocal signs of human discontent. Not in a council chamber, or for that matter anywhere in public. If there are problems, there are solutions, but while there are rapid fire voices penetrating the air, those solutions are harder to grasp.

Maybe if more taxpayers attended township council meetings, the councillors would be a little more behaved. Like the inspectors who once used to frequent public schools to check progress and conduct, the taxpayers might also be able to pass judgement - especially before the next election.

Editor's Notebook by Len Pizze

Elections are relatively rare events in the scheme of things. And for those of us whose job it is to keep a part of the public informed, that can only be seen as a blessing. Elections, I have discovered, expose weekly newspaper reporters and editors to stresses they don't normally face.

The first of these, and the one that's hardest to avoid, is the stress that comes when you know you can't avoid saying something in an editorial about the local campaign and candidates, and yet you also know that by doing so, you're bound to offend one or another group of highly partisan voters in the community. So you hedge your bet. You say most of what you think, because that's part of your job, but you try to be as fair and impartial as humanly possible. And that, of course, will still get you into trouble in an election campaign, because truth in the case of politics at least, is relative, a matter more of interpretation and perception than of fact, and because no one can be entirely fair about politics. Any opinion about the subject, aside from completely dismissing it, embraces tacit disapproval of another. And any expression of that support or disapproval, especially in a public place, is sure to provoke a reaction.

But that, I suppose, is part of the fun in an election campaign. After all, if you can't disagree about politics, what can you agree to disagree about?

The second stress a weekly newspaper editor or reporter faces in an election campaign, especially one that ends on a Tuesday night, is time. To get the results of the election in the local riding onto the front page this week, we had to hold back publication until Wednesday morning, a rare occurrence, but one that was doubly necessary because of the holiday weekend. To talk to the candidates, we were on the telephone 'til midnight, and at the typewriter to 1:30 in the morning. And to get the paper out on time, we were back in the office by 7 a.m. to process film, typeset the final copy, and finish off the front page.

There is a certain exhilaration to it all, though, that makes the long hours and the risk of disapproval worth it. Worth it, in no small measure, because it happens so seldom. And I for one, on this Wednesday morning as the clock ticks past 7:30 a.m., am hoping that Joe Clark and Ed Broadbent can agree to agree for a while. Because the first time they really disagree, we'll be back at all this again.

Feir Play

You might say that last Wednesday was moving day in Haliburton. This was the day that Pollard the Mover transported the old Reid House which has been known as the Haliburton Highlands Pioneer Museum from its location near Rotary Beach in Haliburton to Glebe Park to be placed close to the present new museum. The move caused considerable excitement and there were so many trucks and men around that it reminded one of a day at the C.N.E. No one has any idea just how much work and effort on the part of many goes into moving a building such as this. It took several OPP cruisers and men, Hydro trucks and employees, Department of highways equipment and men plus many other men to make this move.

Many sports fans will tell you that the players who make their living playing hockey in the National Hockey League should be able to tolerate anything with the money they are making. This may be true but on the other hand it's a very hazardous occupation, with long hours, away from home for most of the time and one never knows when a player may be traded from one city to the other in a minute's notice. Then just for a moment just think what a player has to put up with from the fickle fans. Take for instance the first game in the final playoff round recently when the New York Rangers defeated the Canadiens at the Forum 4 - 1 in the opening game. The fans seem to put all of the blame on their goalie Ken Dryden, and got on him so badly that had to be lifted from the game. It would appear to me that they have very short memories and should go back to the many games when the Canadiens playing in front of him had bad games and he held them in there. How soon the fans forget.

The Victoria Holiday weekend has come and gone and as far as we are concerned it was one of the biggest weekends we have seen here in the Highlands of Haliburton for some time now. If the economy is as bad as some people would lead us to believe it is, one would never know it by the large amount of business done by county business people over the weekend. The weekend afforded me with the opportunity to meet and have a chat with many cottagers whom I have had the privilege to meet and get to know on a personal basis during the past several years. I really enjoy meeting these people and I wish them many days of sunshine and warm weather in the summer that lies ahead. May you continue to feel right at home with us.

Just previous to the Victoria Holiday weekend the employees of the Municipality of Dysart et al and the employees of the Department of Transportation and Communications were busy in the Village of Haliburton trying to clean up the sand and debris which had been strewn around town. Before the clean-up I was appalled to see all the litter that was thrown here and there by irresponsible citizens. How in the world can we keep the village clean if this is allowed to continue. In some places it was piled so high you couldn't wade through it. The cenotaph or memorial park at the end of Highland Street was so bad that it reminded one of a pig pen. This is sacred ground and no one should be in there to start with. Let's make it a point to clean up our act and by so doing we will be helping to clean up the town.

The movie "Summer Camp" will be playing at the Molou Theatre in Haliburton this coming Saturday and Sunday, May 26 and 27. Although from all reports that we have received this is an outstanding movie with plenty of laughs, I would like to make it quite clear to movie goers that this is not the same movie that was filmed in Haliburton and surrounding area last year. The movie that was filmed here was to have originally been called "Summer Camp" but we understand that they didn't have the name registered and it was picked up by this other motion picture company and the local movie will now be coming out under a new title.

Larry Medley has opened up an Arcade in the former bakery building behind the Salvation Army Hall in Haliburton. The Arcade is featuring several pin ball machines and we understand that he will have a pool table in the same building in the very near future.

Due to the advanced age in which we live, with our modern technology, we find ourselves involved in many world problems. We find it necessary to depend on each other in order to survive. Whether it be a gas shortage in the United States or the need for food and medical aid in Bangladesh, we become involved. It could be a local mine disaster with the thunder of falling rock, the screech of twisting rails, the rumble of moving earth, somehow we become involved. In response to major and local tragedies the Canadian people, because of their concern, share both materially and financially. But listen, tragedy hits individuals every day - often not the kind that makes for headlines, but it's happening and will happen again. We must be prepared. The Salvation Army, an organization that serves in some eighty-four countries, is ready to deal with almost any crisis. However, they need your help. We should all be involved. Give to the Red Shield Campaign currently in progress.

The Barry Moore Minden Crusade is sponsoring a film on the "Winnipeg Crusade" to introduce Barry Moore. See and hear Barry Moore on film this coming Sunday evening May 27 at 7:30 p.m. at the Minden Public School.

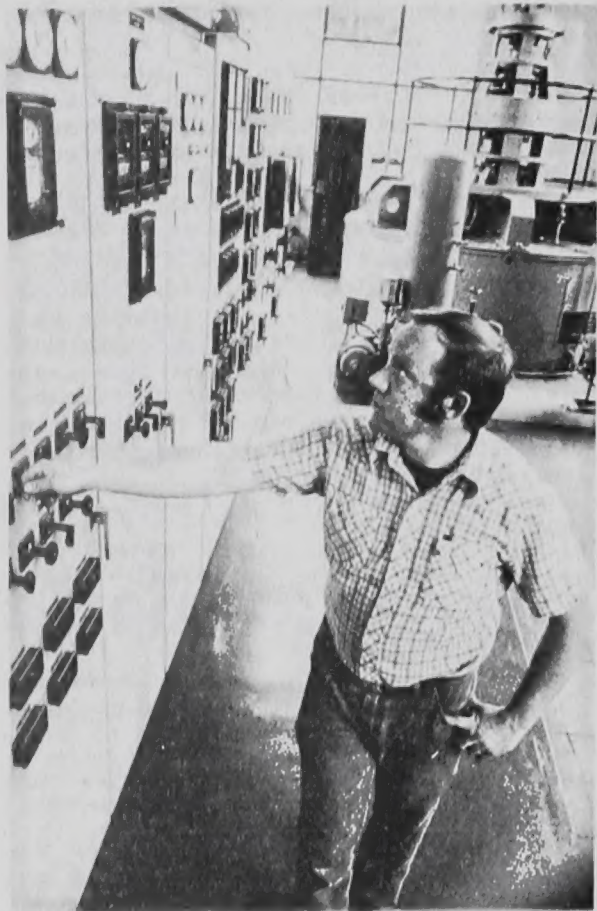

Once again I am making an appeal to the readers of the Echo. If you have any old photos which we can use in our Pic of the Past I would only be too glad to borrow them from you. Our supply is running short at the present time and any photos you might have and could lend us would certainly be appreciated.

Bob Liscombe walks over to the gray panel in the middle of the expansive floor and checks the readings on the dials. 'Everything is where it should be. The automatic control system rarely fails, and a governor handles the water flow.

He stands back from the panel, and tilts his head slightly, and smiles. The deep, muted roar of the generators are in tune, for his sensitive ears have grown accustomed to the sound of the huge twin 2600 horsepower generators. When the machinery is afloat, his ears will pick it up.

Liscombe is there at the station, by himself, maintaining the equipment, lubricating the generators and generally making sure everything is in correct operating order.

"It's just me and that," said Liscombe, pointing to the remote control computer system located behind his desk. From Orillia, technicians can monitor the power flow and make any corrections they feel is necessary in the current. The order is transmitted by radio wave. The unit can start or stop the machinery, decrease or increase the wattage and do a number of other things that took 10 men to do when the station was begun in the mid-thirties.

Liscombe is on a 24-hour, six day a week standby. He doesn't live far from the plant, and can keep his own hours. His boss is a voice on the other end of the transmitter, and this aspect of the job, he says, is what he likes most.

"I like it. You can work at your own pace, and there is no one looking over your shoulder."

But Liscombe has to be ready to act if something ever happens at the plant, for when the machinery

Bob Liscombe and a computer do the work of 10 men

Gull River is harnessed and power is produced fails, it's still the human mind that makes the decisions.

"If lightning ever hits the power lines, there's usually an overload in the system." There are automatic circuit breakers tied into the computer system, but when there's a severe overload, the electricity can burn a hole in the brushes located in the generators. This will cause smoke, but rarely will a fire result.

"Sometimes, you come down after a lightning storm and the building is full of smoke, but that doesn't happen that much." The last burn, in fact, was four years ago, but the plant received word in the mid 1960's.

It was after a lightning storm, and a severe overload caused the control panel to burn out. Flames spread to other parts of the machinery, and before long, the whole plant was ablaze. The generators were salvaged from the fire, but the panels had to be replaced, and the structure of the station was rebuilt.

But the most serious accident Liscombe has ever been in his six years on the job was a burn-out in a generator coil, and it didn't cause much damage.

The isolation in the plant doesn't bother him, but he has had to create a social life "outside of the company. Here, I can't ask a guy I work with to come over for a beer." He's married, but his only real working chum is the plant itself. Indeed, he says he has come to know the machinery "pretty well".

But the machinery may become Liscombe's enemy. Looking around his glass office, he reluctantly admits that automation may soon be his master, and his job may eventually die. "I expect to stay here for a while, but with automation, you never know."

But judging by the look on his face as he walks amongst the mighty generators, both of which churn out four megawatts or 4000 kilowatts at a time, he's still happy to talk about the workings of the station.

"The water goes past the turbine," he shouts over the steady drone of the turning 10 ton flywheel, "and the governor decides how much the water will control the speed of the turbines." The spinning axle creates an electromagnetic field, which in turn becomes electricity.

Both generators are identical, and combined,

Water power is still the cheapest form of energy

Story and photos by Joe Banks

they throw off 4500 kilovolt-amperes and create 5200 horsepower. There are three other power plants owned by the Orillia Power Company outside of the city, and combined with the Horseshoe River hydro plant, they can supply Orillia with a third of its power needs. The remainder is purchased from Ontario Hydro.

"Our forefathers in the commission had the foresight to develop these sites," said Liscombe of the station's origins, "but today, they only produce a third of what we use."

Water power is still the cheapest form of energy, and Liscombe says that it will continue to be the leader in power sources, despite the step-up of construction of nuclear installations. He believes nuclear energy is the power of the future, but he has mixed feelings about its application today. "I don't think we know quite enough about it yet," he said. "It's only my personal opinion, but they still haven't figured out what to do with the waste. Look at Three Mile Island - they really don't know how to control it."

Liscombe believes that water power is not now and will not in the future give way to nuclear power. He thinks the smaller plants such as the installation along the Horseshoe River will last for some time. In fact, he says, Ontario Hydro is even opening up some of its smaller facilities which were shut down years ago.

And despite the technology, despite the blueprints, despite all the time saving and cheap methods of providing water power effectively, Bob Liscombe at the Horseshoe River plant knows there is always room for the human and personal, touch.

Provincial parks openings announced

The Ministry of Natural Resources announces the following timetable for the summer season in Ontario's provincial parks.

Most provincial parks will be operating with full services by May 18 in southern Ontario and by June 1 in Northern Ontario (above the French and Mattawa Rivers).

On those dates, at least a portion of each park will have all park facilities such as running water, comfort stations and electricity, available to visitors.

Ministry parks officials point out that even before the official summer season begins, anyone may visit a provincial park, even though facilities may be minimal at the time. In some cases, visitors may find the road into the park gated to prevent vehicle entry, but visitors are welcome to enter on foot.

Some exceptions to the summer season dates for provincial parks are:

- Bonnechere, Grundy Lake and Driftwood provincial parks will be open on weekends from May 18 to June 15, then begin operating with full services for the remainder of the summer;

- Carson Lake, Silent Lake, Lake St. Peter, Mikisew and Oastler Lake provincial parks will be open on weekends from June 1 to June 15, then begin full service operations;

The Wizard of Oz
by L. Frank Baums

Leisa Street, Grade 4.

These people live in Kansas. The girl's name is Dorothy. She and her dog Toto live in a neat little house. Dorothy makes friends with a scarecrow who looks like a normal scarecrow, a tinman who is made out of tin and a lion who is a normal lion. Dorothy is around seven and Toto is young too.

I like Dorothy and her friends but I don't like the witch because she tries to kill people.
Dorothy wanted to go home but first she had to destroy the wicked witch of the west. The most exciting part is where Dorothy kills the witch. I liked this book but would have put more people in the story. I would like to have others read it because I think they would like it.

A Chimp in the Family
by Charlotte Becker

Brian Hopwood, Grade 4.

The story takes place in an apartment in New York. In the kitchen are the children and there is a pet who is a chimp. The chimp was covered with fur and he was always doing funny things. He kept getting into mischief. I did not like the people who lived in the apartment upstairs. One day the children dressed the chimp up in a dress. He got into some jam and soiled the dress. Then the children decided to take a trip to the zoo and chimp went with them. The most exciting thing was when the chimp saw another chimp and he went crazy. I like this story but would have changed the part about the chimp having a cold.

Amendment will protect car owner

An amendment to The Insurance Act will give owners of commercial vehicles better protection against legal actions brought by injured passengers, consumer minister Frank Drea announced last week.

"When the amendment takes effect May 15 it will remove a policy restriction which in some circumstances left commercial vehicle owners without insurance protection to cover any legal judgments made against them for injuries to passengers," said Drea. "The amendment also ensures that money will be available to pay these judgments."

The policy restriction took effect if there were more than three people, including the driver, in the vehicle at the time of the accident. Commercial vehicles are classed as any vehicle other than a private passenger, station wagon or bus-type vehicle.

Wilberforce News

by Winnie Schofield

At the senior citizens' meeting of Tuesday, May 15, Mrs. May Croft was given a party to mark her 90th birthday. After the pinning on of a lovely corsage she was presented with a life membership pin. Friends gathered around and sang Happy Birthday, as she cut into the cake prepared in her honour.

Further celebrations took place at the home of her son Mel Croft and his wife Bessie on Sunday, May 20. The house was decorated with many beautiful flowers from Vineland. Relatives and guests were welcomed in the afternoon and over a hundred people came to pay their respects to this long time resident of Wilberforce who came here around 1920 from her home in England. One of the highlights of the day was the arrival of George Grant and his family in an old 1927 Willys Knight.

Mrs. Croft received a plaque from the provincial government and letters of good wishes from Prime Minister Trudeau, Stewart Smith and John Eakins.
The Kinsmen had a successful weekend with a large number of tourists on hand to visit the displays. A good crowd attended the evening dance.

The Wilberforce Branch

624 of the Royal Canadian Legion has re-elected Walter Klapow as president. Vice president is Earle Whitney, second vice president is Dave Wardle. Gordon Barnes remains as secretary and Murray Agnew will continue his position as treasurer.

Walter Klapow and his wife Lucille, attended the annual four day Legion convention for Ontario branches. This year it was held in Sudbury. The attendance was estimated at five thousand and the parade was one of the largest on record. Each unit brought a band along providing plenty of excellent marching music.

The blackflies are getting worse, says a young pupil

EDITOR'S NOTE: No one can stray outside the protection of their house these late May days without facing an assault from blackflies. Fortunately for all of us, their presence is short lived. By early June, the blackflies have all but disappeared, to be replaced by swarms of every hungry mosquitoes.

found out about black flies. That night I had a scary dream. A giant fly came. He picked me up. He carried me off for many days and nights and he dropped me in a volcano. When I was falling I awakened. The end.

This week the Echo received in the mail a composition written by a student at Victoria Street School that uses blackflies as its theme. Writes Victoria Street principal Ruth Gorrie:

"We thought you may be interested in publishing this 'typical' story in your newspaper. It was written by a grade three pupil and makes an interesting 'black fly' season story."

GRADUATION

Judy, daughter of Bernard and Betty Trumbull of Minden, has graduated from the legal secretarial course at Sir Sandford Fleming College in Peterborough. The graduation exercises took place on May 12 and were attended by Judy's parents and her brother Myles, and sister-in-law Sandra of Trenton, Sylvia Holland of Haliburton and Randy Barras of Wilberforce. Judy was a graduate of H.H.S.S. in 1977 where she took the five year advanced level. Judy is interested in all sports and figure skating. Judy is presently employed as legal secretary for local barrister, Donald J. Finn, of Minden.

Wruth gave a report of expenses. After these were paid, a donation of $3,340 was made to St. Paul's Anglican Church. Prizes were presented for lone hands to Della Griffin, and perfect attendance to Joyce Hewitt and Harry MacMinn.

Gladys thanked all who had made the year so successful with donations of food; helping set up or just coming to the card parties. On behalf of the group, Anne Dawson presented Gladys with two lawn chairs with the thanks of all. The mini card games will start on September 26, at 1:30 sharp. Any newcomers as well as the "Old Gang" are more than welcome to attend.

There was a gathering of the clan last Sunday, when Ethel Harrison, Bill and Irene Moore, Lloyd and Jo Brownridge, Ivan and Dorothy Cade, Muriel and Earl Bird and family, gathered at Helen and Alan Brydson's cottage to celebrate Steve Brydson's 16th birthday which was on May 18.

The Ray Rivers family spent the holiday with Maude Coulter.

The Minden Women's Institute held their May meeting at St. Paul's parish hall on the afternoon of the 16, with new president Mrs. C. Brown in charge. After the usual opening, the roll call was answered by 24 members telling the name of their favourite flower. Mrs. D. Berry was welcomed as a new member. After giving the treasurer's report, Mrs. A. S. Kernohan, mentioned that all the bus tickets had been spoken for. Mrs. Moore reported sending 20 cards since April meeting.

Delegates to District Annual at Fenelon Falls, May 24, will be Mrs. C. Brown, Mrs. J. Hulbig, Mrs. L. Cox, Mrs. S. Ewing, with others welcome to go as well. Mrs.

Lyman Cox was appointed District Director as Mrs. Ewing is moving away, alternate will be Mrs. M. Bunker. Executive members and convenors will meet at the library at 1:15 p.m. to make up the programs for 1979/80.

Public Relations report for the past year was given by convenor Mrs. M. Sears. Committee to judge Minden school exhibit are Mrs. Ewing, Mrs. Brown, Mrs. Dawson and Mrs. Sears. The meeting ended with a poem "Mother's Prayer" read by Mrs. Bunker and all enjoyed the meal served by the committee.

The next meeting will take the form of a pot luck luncheon at the United Church Hall at 12:30 p.m. on June 20. Everyone is asked to bring their own cutlery, dishes, and food. Anyone interested in coming is welcome to this meeting and the friendship of the W.I.

The trend to vandalism is increasing, not decreasing, and from now on the O.P.P. will be busy. On the weekend it was bad, with a window broken at the Brewery, as well as other damage. Every morning the parking lot at the funeral home has to be raked because of bottles broken; to me this is not a place for one and all to park; it should be respected like the churches; but then the churches are not respected as they should be either, are they? Our laundromat has suffered lots of damage lately. There is no need for that either as it does a service to the whole community, and if it is closed then all will suffer, but those who do the damage do not realize that or else do not have the intellect to see they are hurting themselves as well as others.

Mrs. Ethel Harrison is spending this week at Bracebridge with Helen and Alan Brydson.

Adios and take care now.

Using Nipple Waterers In Hog Buildings

Nipple waterers are becoming more popular every day in confinement hog buildings and there are several reasons for this.

Nipple waterers are so simple. There are fewer working parts and less maintenance involved than in float or bowl-type waterers. However, initial cost is another benefit and there is less water wasted with the nipple waterer.

The nipples also supply fresh water at all times. Bowl waterers tend to collect manure. This is not very appetizing and also presents some real health hazards.

Originally, nipple waterers were used in the growing and finishing stages but now are used with good success for sows in crates and little pigs in their creepers. However, if you have some pens equipped with cup or bowl-type waterers and you move pigs from these pens to pens with nipple waterers, make sure the pigs know how they work. Just run the nipple waterer in front of them so they'll know where it is and how it works. One critical time may be when you're bringing in feeder pigs. Usually, you want to get medicated water into them as soon as possible, so make sure they know how to use the nipple.

Give special consideration to using nipple waterers in farrowing crates. Separate nipples for the sow and pigs are recommended as the little pigs need a special teat-type waterer.

Also, don't skimp on the number of waterers because less water is available at one time. The recommendation is not more than 20 pigs per nipple waterer.

In conclusion, most nipple waterers have a neight adjustment and the recommendation here is to have the nipple level with the pig's back. Although this does require changing as the pigs grow, most of them have a very quick and easy adjustment.

These are just a few recommendations that will help you get the most out of this new, economical and sanitary way of making sure your pigs of all ages receive the required amount of fresh, clean water at all times.

Agricrew - Something New

Agricrew is a new program in this area, sponsored by the Ontario Ministry of Agriculture and Food, and is designed to benefit both youth and farm employers.

An "Agricrew" consists of five capable workers. These crews are available to work on farms for up to five days, during the length of the program. The program begins June 25, and runs till August 17, 1979.

The cost of the program to the farm employer is $90.00 for the services of an Agricrew per day. At the conclusion of the program, the farmer will be reimbursed $15.00 per day for the total number of work agreements made throughout the program.

The crews provide their own transportation and lunch. They will work one full day. The crews are trained to perform manual labour such as cleaning fence rows, tidying tool sheds, repairing fences, cleaning barns, picking stones, painting and helping with harvest.

Employers are to be engaged in an agriculturally oriented operation and may request the services of one crew only. A work agreement must be signed indicating method of payment, work to be done, and alternate work plans for inclement weather.

An Agricrew could also be hired to help agricultural societies prepare their grounds for community fairs.

Interested farmers in Victoria and Haliburton Counties should contact the Lindsay Agricultural Office several weeks before Agricrew services will be needed. Applications for work agreements will be accepted throughout the summer on a first-come, first-served basis.

The law is enforced by the police, and conviction can result in a fine of up to $10,000, in the discretion of the Court.
